President. A dispatch was received at Washington Wednesday morning, announcing the death of Wm. P. Johnson, Esq., the only brother of the President of the United States, and late the Collector at Velasco. He died on the 6th inst., rom the effects of an accidental gunshot wound.

at. Johnson was a resident of Brazoria county, Texas. He was four years older than the President. When Audrew Johnson was apprenticed to the trade of a tailor, his brother was a journeyman carpenter. The two brothers were parted when very young, and until the present year they had not met since their mother's death in 1839. During the late war Mr. Johnson was uncompromisingly loyal. He remained quietly at home with his wife and son, a lad of fifteen.

He possessed several peculiarities, which were beirayed by every conversation in which BALSAM is the most perfect, soothing, healing and infalhe was engaged. He was bitterly opposed to he was engaged. He was bitterly opposed to negro slavery, and used to scout at the modern of the Lungs.

N. B.—Ask for Dr. CARTER'S COUGH BALSAM, and notion that a white man can't work in the South as well as a negro; for, said he, "I have Price: 75 cents for trial bottle; large bottles, $1 50 per

He was vivacious and rapid in his utterance son; of keen insight into character; and his DR. EASTERLY'S AMERICAN LINIconversation was filled with practical facts, will Cure Bruises, Sprains, Cuts, Wounds, Rheumatism, collected in a lifetime of close observation.

He had none of the retirence of a redition. He had none of the retisence of a politician, his sentiments being pronounced on all questions and unmistakatle, and his hatred of slavery and negroes, secession and negro equality, alike cordial. He was eminently a self-made man, and his ideas had the strength without breadth, which is peculiar to such characters. As a shrewd, clear-headed observer of Southern men and institutions through a long lifetime, his views were worthy of consideration. He made no pretensions to being an exponent of his brother's sentiments or policy, declaring on one occasion, after visiting the President, that "Andrew would not give him any definite information as to what he intended to do." He was short of stature, stout and muscular; had a keen, gray eye, and a truly patriarchial beard. He had just returned to Texas when he received the wound from which he died.
